

Abstract

The present invention is directed to a novel strain of feline immunodeficiency virus, designated herein as FIV-141, and to attenuated forms of the virus produced by mutating specific regions of the viral genome. The virus and mutated forms of the virus may be used to 5 induce the production of antibodies to FIV-141, and in vaccines designed to protect cats from FIV.